Falmouth, Eng., Feb. 10. — The American steamer Wilhelmina, destined for Germany with a cargo of foodstuffs, is still anchored in the local harbor under charge of her own officers. Apparently there has been no attempt up to the present time to seize either the vessel or her cargo. Her commander explains that he put into Falmouth because during the very heavy storm of Feb. 2 and 3 one of his lifeboats was torn from its moorings and swept away and all of the others were stove in.
